You may have seen or heard that the Prime Minister, Boris Johnson, has asked the Queen to 'prorogue' i.e suspend Parliament for up to five weeks, before it returns on October 14th when the Queen's Speech will take place.

Do you think this suspension of parliament is intended to....

In order to suspend Parliament, the government has to receive permission from the Queen, which is usually a formality.

It is an established precedent to Suspend Parliament before a Queen's Speech, albeit generally more briefly, and rarely, if ever, at such a constitutionally important moment - with Brexit just weeks away.

Do you think it is fair or unfair of the government to place the Queen in this situation?

Imagine that the Conservatives and the Brexit Party formed an electoral pact in which the Brexit Party stood down its candidates and in return the Conservatives guaranteed a No Deal Brexit. In such an eventuality how would you vote? Would you vote Conservative, Labour, Liberal Democrats, UKIP or for another party?
