As you may know, the 'triple lock' in state pension provision guarantees that the amount pensioners receive increases every year in line with the rising cost of living, increasing averages wages, or 2.5% - whichever of the three is higher. It was in the Conservative government's 2019 election manifesto. This year, because of an unusual situation, pensioners are due to receive an exceptionally large rise of 8.8% in the state pension. Some people think this is unaffordable for the country and unfair on workers, while others think the Triple Lock is there to protect pensioners from low incomes in retirement.

Which one of the following do you think should happen?

Keep the Triple Lock, giving pensioners an 8.8% increase in pensions this year	46	46	46	25	25	38	58	78
Flatten out' earnings growth over two or more years to reduce the value of the pensions rise this year	19	23	15	36	30	19	8	7
Replace the Triple Lock with a Double Lock based on inflation or the 2.5% target, whichever is highest (which will reduce the value of the pensions rise this year)	12	12	12	11	12	14	14	10

As you may know, the 'triple lock' in state pension provision guarantees that the amount pensioners receive increases every year in line with the rising cost of living, increasing averages wages, or 2.5% - whichever of the three is higher. It was in the Conservative government's 2019 election manifesto. This year, because of an unusual situation, pensioners are due to receive an exceptionally large rise of 8.8% in the state pension. Some people think this is unaffordable for the country and unfair on workers, while others think the Triple Lock is there to protect pensioners from low incomes in retirement.
